Indonesia Archipelago

Indonesia is the largest archipelago and the fourth most populous country in the world, consisting of five main islands likely Sumatra, Java, Kalimantan, Sulawesi and Papua, with 33 provinces. It has a total 17,508 islands of which about 6,000 are inhabited. It stretches 5,150 km between the Australian and Asian continental mainland and divides the Pacific and Indian Oceans at the Equator. The name of Indonesia is composed of two Greek words: "Indos" which means Indian and "nesos" meaning islands. The capital city of Indonesia is Jakarta.

General Information

Climate

The east monsoon from June to September brings dry weather while the west monsoon from December to March.

Transitional period between these two are interposed by occasional rain showers, but even in the midst of the west monsoon season, temperatures range from 21 degrees C (70 F) to 33 degrees C (90 F) except at higher altitudes, which are much cooler. Heavy rainfalls are recorded in December and January. Humidity is between 60-100%.

Languages and Dialects

There are more than 483 languages and dialects spoken in the archipelago. There normally belong to the 350 different ethnic groups of population. Bahasa Indonesia is the national language, written in Roman script and based on European orthography. In all tourist destination areas English is the number one foreign languages fairly spoken and written.

National Parks

A unique marine biodiversity hotspot, the Wallacea region with 28,000 flora species from tiny rare orchids to the giant Rafflesia flower; 3,500 species of animals including the endangered orangutans of Sumatra and Borneo, the unique giant lizard of Komodo, the horned Java Rhinoceros and the last tigers of Sumatra.

Cuisine

The staple food of most Indonesian is "nasi" (rice). On some of the island in eastern Indonesia, the staple food traditionally ranged from corn, sago, and cassava to sweet potatoes. Fishes feature prominently in the diet as fresh, salted, dried, smoked or a paste. Coconuts are found everywhere and besides being produced for cooking oil, its milk – is an ingredient for many dishes. Spices and hot chili peppers are the essence of most cooking and in some areas they are used generously such as in West Sumatra, North Sulawesi. Each province or area has its own cuisine, which vary in the method of cooking and ingredients. The Javanese cuisine is probably more palatable to the general taste and consists of vegetables, soybeans, beef, chicken, and other varieties. The Sumatrans generally eat more beef compared to the other regions. West Sumatra

Particularly is known for its Padang restaurants found nationwide. Beside the hot and spicy food, these restaurants are known for their unique style of service. Further to the east, seafood features on the daily diet, either grilled or made into curries. In Bali, Papua and the highlands of North Sumatra and North Sulawesi pork dishes are special. Pork is usually served in Chinese restaurants or non-Moslem regions. There is a wide variety of tropical and sub-tropical fruits and vegetables all year round. Coffee and tea plantations are plentiful, growing on several islands, and served everywhere from restaurants to small village stalls. There are several breweries, which produce local beer. Bali produces "brem" which is a rice wine, whereas Toraja has its "tuak" which also known in North Sumatra. Most common nationwide are "sate" (skewered grilled meat), "gado-gado" (vegetable salad with a peanut sauce), "nasi goreng" (fried rice) served at anytime) and “bakmi goreng” (fried noodles).

SUMATRA

Sumatra is the third biggest island in the archipelago. The massive Bukit Barisan mountain range which runs almost the entire length of the island make up Sumatra's diverse landscape of dense tropical forests, rugged coastlines, wide sandy beaches, deep gorges and steamy swamps. A large part of them are protected reserves, such as the Great Bukit Barisan Forest Reserve in North Sumatra. Sumatra today is divided into nine provinces: Nanggroe Aceh Darussalam (NAD), North Sumatra, West Sumatra, Riau and the Riau Archipelago, Jambi, Bengkulu, Bangka-Belitung, Lampung and South Sumatra.

NANGROE ACEH DARUSSALAM

Aceh is a special territory of Indonesia, located on the northern tip of the island of Sumatra. Its full name is Nangroe Aceh Darussalam. It is thought to have been in Aceh where Islam was firstly established in Southeast Asia. In the early seventeenth century the Sultanate of Aceh was the most wealthy, powerful and cultivated state in Malacca Straits region. Aceh has a history of political independence and fierce resistance to control by outsiders, including the former Dutch colonists and the Indonesian government. Aceh has substantial natural resources, including oil and gas – some estimates put Aceh gas reserves as being the largest in the world. Relative to most of Indonesia, it is a religiously conservative area.

Muara Takus Temple. Like many others structures of its kind in Sumatra, the Buddha temple near the village of Muara Takus in the Tigabelas Koto district, was built with red bricks and sand. The temple is believed to have been built at around the 9th century A.D. when the power of the South Sumatra-based Sriwijaya Empire was at its peak. Excavations are still being made to determine the precise age and function of the dome enclosing an effigy of Buddha. It can be reached in 118 km from Pekanbaru.

Kerumutan Nature Reserve. Located in mainland Riau in the Kuala Kampar district, this 120,000 hectares (30,000 acres) natural reserve can be reached in 18 hours by motorboat from Pekanbaru.

Bono. It is a curious natural phenomenon which the Rokan River (in the Kampar regency) displays daily along its downstream reaches. Every day at the time high tide sets in; a swelling appears in the water at the river mouth. Accompanied by a rumbling sound, the swelling grows in mass until it is about as high as a small tree, spinning as it moves upwards along the river and growing smaller in the process until it finally disappears.

Places of Interest

Tanjung Pinang. Tanjung Pinang is a busy town on Bintan Island, now as a capital of Riau Archipelago. It has a museum on Jl. Katamso. A large section of the old part of town was built in traditional local fashion, on stilts, over the water. Tanjung Pinang is located at about 10 km from the airport. This town also has 2 ports, Sri Bintan Pura in Tanjung Pinang and Sri Bayantan in Kijang. Tanjung Pinang serves flight to Pekanbaru and Natuna.

Batu Bedaun Beach. It is very famous among the teenagers in Dabo Singkep. The beach situated 20 km from Dabo. This white sandy beach is very clean, with blue sea and small wave.

Daik. It is a small town but has many historical relics of Riau Lingga Kingdom as in the Penyengat Island. We can reach the town by speedboats from Tanjung Pinang. In Lingga Island there are also many variations of tropical plantation and marine water fish species that cannot be found in other places. Other interesting objects are Mount Daik with 3 peaks.

Senayang Island. Boat cruising touring the waters between the islands is among potential attractions. Some real and thrilling adventures are available since there are many islands surrounding Sanayang and excellent packages include cycling, bush walking, swimming, snorkeling, and diving.

Tambelan Island. It is about 200 km away from Tanjung Pinang. There are only six villages which are spread over a few islands, with a total population of about 4,000. The environment here is largely unspoilt, and the scenery is truly magnificent. One of the most interesting of natural attraction in this island is watching turtles laying their eggs in great number that protected by local peoples.

Bintan Island. International investors have developed many new hotels, integrated world-class resorts, and international golf courses on the island of Bintan. Other developments include industrial parks, medical, commercial and banking facilities that are readily available to any visitors. During your visit to Riau Archipelago will not be bored or uninspired because there are many other interesting places like Pasar Ikan (Fish Market) where fresh, cheap seafood and vegetables are sold. There are also the Akau (Night Market), Pelantar (Water Villages) and shops selling local handicraft, natural attraction like watching the turtles laying their eggs or fishing on the Kelong.

Still in use is the old vice royal mosque, the Mosque of Raya, there is also a newly built cultural center for stage performances of Malay music and dances.

SOUTH SUMATRA

One of the greatest kingdoms in Indonesian history, the Buddhist Empire of Sriwijaya, prospered along the banks of Musi River in South Sumatra over a thousand years ago. Located on the southernmost rim of the South China Sea, close to the one of the world's busiest shipping lanes linking the Far East with Europe, the Region's historical background is rich and colorful. The Sriwijaya Kingdom practiced a bustling trade with ancient China during its era of powerful dynasties.

In 672 the Chinese scholar, I Tsing, recorded that a thousand monks and scholars could be seen translating and studying Sanskrit in Palembang. Few relics of this memorable are remain. Stretching from the foothills of the mighty Bukit Barisan Mountain range, the province is relatively flat but very fertile, with numerous rivers cutting across the landscape and meandering their way to the sea. Coffee and tea plantation are scattered across the province, but area's enormous wealth comes from oils, natural gases, coals, tins, and quartz reserves.

South Sumatra is famous for Songket wearing which are made of silk thread combined with gold thread. Palembang is also famous for its wood carving motifs that influenced by the Chinese and Buddhist. The carvings are dominated by decorations in the form of jasmine flower and lotus that can be seen in the furniture and lacquers. Palembang's famous fruits are pineapple and duku (Lansium domisticum).

The name of Bangka is derived from the word "WANGKA", which means tin. This word was also written in Sriwijaya stone inscription dated 686 AD and discovered near the town of Kota Kapur in West Bangka. Today this inscription is kept in the National Museum in Jakarta. Bangka is the main tin producer in Indonesia and also well known for its white pepper. The group of islands making up the Bangka Belitung Province is almost located on the equator with latitude of 1 degree 30 to 3 degree 0' and a longitude of 105 to 107 degrees east.

With excellence of comparability and supported by regional ecosystem of archipelago, coastal area and the island with the other, Bangka Belitung presents marine tourism (diving, scuba, snorkeling, fishing and sailing). There are approximately 55 Chinese or Buddhist temples on Bangka alone that are still in use. The Chinese make up at least the descendants of the coolies who worked the tin mines. The Oldest temple is in Batang Rusa, a village along the road from Pangkalpinang to Liat River. A beautifully decorated temple is found near Tayu in the north of Bangka Island.

WEST JAVA

The enchanting land of Sunda stretches from the Sunda Strait in the West to the borders of Central Java in the east. The region is primarily mountainous, with rich green valleys hugging lofty volcanic peaks, many of which surround the capital of the province, Bandung. The history of West Java is a story of trade, spices, and the rise and fall of powerful kingdoms. In the late 1500's the region was ruled from mighty Cirebon, which still survives as a sultanate today, although a shadow of its former glory. West Java was one of the first contact points in Indonesia for Indian traders and their cultural influences and it was here that the Dutch and British first set foot in the archipelago.

Getting there

Domestic airlines serve to Bandung everyday. Buses from Central Java and Jakarta arrive in Leuwi Panjang. Several trains operate from Jakarta and Yogyakarta to Bandung. Beside that there is an international flight (AirAsia) from Kuala Lumpur to Bandung.

Places of Interests

Bandung. Bandung is the capital of West

Java. It is situated at 768 meters above sea level and about 180 kms Southeast of Jakarta and is called "The Paris of Java" because of its tree-lined boulevards and artistic influences. The city gained international venue for the first Asia-Africa Conference in 1955 which brought together the leaders of 29 Asian and African Nations with the aim of promoting economic and cultural relations and taking a common stand against colonialism. Bandung offers great promise for shoppers. A wide variety of places from the exuberant atmosphere of shopping blocks along alleyways or second markets that often tempt you with things that western style air conditioned-department stores, modern shopping stores and factory outlets. 3 hours drive from Jakarta, on the way to Bandung through a beautiful mountain landscape Puncak pass, Lembang and the Bosscha Planet Observatory, or even higher to the volcanic crater of Tangkuban Perahu, the only "drive up" volcano on the island. Visit the nearby Ciater Hot Spring Resort for a swim in warm mineral water pools. Patenggang Lake is in the south which covered by tea plantation, Kawah Putih (white crater) near the town of Ciwidey, about one hours' drive from Bandung.

Bogor. Bogor actually lies closer to Jakarta (50 km) than it does to Bandung (120 km). Appropriately named by the Dutch as a town 'without worries', Bogor was chosen as the first palace of the Dutch Governor 1745. Restored in 1832, the palace sits elegantly amidst gardens and expansive lawns where deer roam freely under majestic old trees. The world-famous Bogor Botanical Garden borders the Palace Grounds, covering an area of 87 hectares with thousands of species of plant life from all over the world, including towering ancient trees and world's largest flower, the Rafflesia. There are over 15,000 species of trees and plants, 400 varieties of palms. The orchid houses contain over 3,000 orchid varieties.

Garut. Garut is a characteristic Sundanese town in the highlands and surrounded by volcanic mountains and vast tree plantation. The hot springs resort at Cipanas has comfortable accommodations. Nearby Mt. Papandayan's crater is probably one of the most spectacular mountains scenes on Java. The Cangkuang temple was the first of its kind found in West Java, dating back to the 8th centuries.

Kampung Naga (Dragon Village). The uniqueness of Kampung Naga is that in spite of its proximity to modern society it has retained its traditional customs over the centuries, some 30 km from Tasikmalaya.

Cirebon. Traveling northeast from Bandung towards the coast, the seaport of Cirebon offers a wealth of culture and history. Situated on the border of West and Central Java, it is home to a combination of both cultures. In the city itself, the ancient palaces (kratons) of the Kasepuhan and Kanoman now serve as museum, which are open to the public, exhibiting household ornaments, paintings, calligraphy and other art treasures of the courts. The royal carriage are sumptuous in design, one of them a gilded coach in the form of winged elephant. Cirebon is also known for its mega mending (clouds) design batik, now Pangandaran. It is one of Java's best-kept secrets as far as international tourists are concerned, but has been extremely popular with locals for a long, long time. A small fishing town, it possesses one of Java's finest beaches and the Pangandaran Nature Reserve teems with wild buffalos, barking deers and monkeys. It can be reached by bus about 5 hours from Bandung and 8 hours from Jakarta.

Taman Safari (Safari Park). Animals from all continents roam freely in this 35-hectares park, 75 km southeast of Jakarta along the Jakarta-Bandung route. The park is a recreational ground with a swimming pool, tennis courts, an artificial lake, waterfall and a children's playground and amusement park, restaurants and caravan.

Mt. Gede Pangrango National Park. It is a stunningly wild and beautiful landscape filled with exotic tropical flora such as the Javanese edelweiss.

CENTRAL JAVA

The history has left its footprints across Central Java, an area rich in culture and tradition descending from powerful Hindu and Buddhist past, and more recent Islamic influence. Under the Syailendra and Old Mataram Kings in the 8th and 10th centuries the Hindu-Javanese culture flourished, and it was during this period that Java's most remarkable religious monuments were built such as Borobudur, the most magnificent monument to Mahayana Buddhism in the world; the enormous Hindu temple complex of Prambanan, and the ancient site of the oldest Hindu temples in Java on the Dieng Plateau.

EAST JAVA

The Majapahit dynasty, based in and around East Java, began the foundations of an empire that was to dominate the entire Indonesian archipelago, the Malay Peninsula and part of the Philippines for hundreds of years. This was the beginning of profitable trade relations with China, Cambodia, Siam, Burma and Vietnam. As the power in Central Java declined in the 10th century, powerful kingdoms rose in East Java to fill the power vacuum. During the reign of King Erlangga both East Java and Bali enjoyed lucrative trade with the surrounding islands, and an artistic and intellectual renaissance. Parts of the Mahabarata epic were translated and re-interpreted to conform to an East Javanese philosophy and view of life, and it was from this era that East Java inherited much of its temple art.

Today the open-air amphitheater at Pandaan performances tell some of the stories of the glorious past, set against an impressive backdrop of distant volcanoes, capturing the spirit of the province's culture and scenery. East Java's claim to fame in modern history is its vanguard role in the struggle for independence against colonial forces in 1945. Little of the Majapahit Empire's former glory still stands in East Java. Nevertheless, East Java has a variety of attractions, ranging from temple sites to unspoiled beaches, stunning volcanoes, extra ordinary highland lakes, resplendent marine parks and fantastic wildlife reserves. The provincial capital, Surabaya is second in size, population, and commerce only to Jakarta. It is also the most industrialized province in the nation with the strong economy based on agriculture, (coffee, mangoes and apples), fisheries and oil.

BALI

Art and culture are strongly bonded to Bali's unique form of Hinduism called "Hindu Dharma". Classical dance dramas are based on the old Hindu epic of the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, but contain an element of local folklore peculiar to the island. The very soul of Bali is rooted in religion and is expressed in art forms that have been passionately preserved over the centuries. It seems that almost every person is an artist. Whether expressed through beautiful and intricate paintings and dances, extraordinary carvings, superb weaving or even in decorations made for the myriad shrines, the island is alive with art.

Regular performances of the popular dances such as the legong kraton, the barong kris and the baris dances, easily found throughout Bali. They usually staged for tourists by the village people. The Kecak is performed at night by torchlight. They have managed to preserve their culture despite overwhelming foreign influences brought to the region by an ever-increasing number of tourists. Water sports have naturally gained in popularity and Bali offers superb surfing, windsurfing, sailing, scuba diving and white water rafting.

pillars and the artists instructing apprentices.

Ubud. The center of Balinese painting, Ubud's Museum "Puri Lukisan" has a permanent collection of modern works of Balinese art dating from the turn of the century. There are several art galleries and homes of famous artists Dutch-born Hans Snel and American Antonio Blanco. Ubud has several small hotels, located in the foothills of the central mountain range and terrace paddy fields, giving it a cool and pleasant climate.

Peliatan. It is located between Ubud and Mas, known as the center of traditional music and dances.

Kintamani. The villages of Kintamani and Penelokan give a view of Batur Lake and the active Mt. Batur. The Caldera of Batur is 7 miles in diameter and 60 feet deep. From Penelokan, a road leads to Kedisan on the shores of the lake where boats can be hired to cross over Trunyan. This ancient village is inhabited by people who call themselves "Bali Aga" or "Original" Balinese, and have maintained many of their old ways until now.

Pura Kahren. It is Bali's second largest temple, with three terraced courtyards are connected by steps, and their balustrades are decorated with carvings and statues. A large Banyan tree with a tower shades the lowest and second courtyard, while in the third courtyard several shrines for the gods and ancestors are found.

Klungkung. The former seat of the Javanese Hindu Kingdom in Bali, from which Balinese royalty draws its bloodline; Klungkung was the oldest kingdom on the island and the King (Raja) the most exalted. The Kerta Gosa or Royal Court of Justice, built in the 18th century, known for its ceiling murals, painted in the traditional puppet style, portraying punishment in hell and the rewards in heaven. The floating pavilion, garden and lotus ponds in this walled-in complex are a reminder of the former glory of this kingdom.

Besakih. It is known as the “Mother of Bali Temple”, the sanctuary of Besakih on the slopes of Mt. Agung, the biggest and holiest of all Balinese temples. Over thousand years old, steps ascend through spilt gates to the main temples dedicated to the Trinity (Shiva, Brahma, and Visnu), are 18 separate sanctuaries belonging to different regencies and caste groups. To the Balinese, a visit to the temple's sanctuaries is a special pilgrimage. Each has its own anniversary celebration or “Odalan”. The sight of the mountain impressive and during festivals colored inners adds a touch of gaiety.

Sangeh. Ten hectares of nutmeg trees in the Sangeh forest abound with monkeys. The forest is considered sacred, so no wood allowed to be chopped here. Two temples stand in the middle of the forest and another at the edge. As they live in this sacred forest, the monkeys are also held sacred and are rather tame, but it is advisable not to play with them.

Bedugul. The mountain resort of Bedugul, 18 km north of Denpasar, is known for its excellent golf course. Located besides Bratan Lake, it is surrounded by forested hills. A beautiful sight is the “Ulun Danu” temple which seems to rise out of the lake. The area offers good walks. Boats are available for water skiing and parasailing. The Bali Handara Country Club has bungalows for rent and a restaurant.

Tenganan. Protected for centuries from the outside world by its surrounding walls, the village of Tenganan has maintained its ancient pre-Hindu customs through a strong code of non-fraternization with outsiders. Here unique rituals, dances, and gladiator like battles between youths take place. Tenganan is famous for its “double ikat” woven material called Gringsing, which is supposed to protect the weather with magic powers.

Sanur. Sanur offers many good hotels, reataurants, shops, and other tourist facilities. It is only a short drive from Denpasar. Public transportation is easily available until night. Offshore reefs protect the beach and make it popular for windsurfing, boating and other water sports.

Tampak Siring. The Temple of Pura Tirta Empul was built around the sacred spring at Tampak Siring. Over 1,000 years old, the temple and its two bathing places have been valued by the people because of the spring water's curative powers. Regular ceremonies are held for purification. Specialties of the area are bone and ivory carvings.

The Nusa Dua. The tourist resort is part of the Bukit Peninsula in Southern Bali. Some of the most beautiful and luxurious hotels are found here. The resort is known for its clean white beaches and clear waters. The surf is gentle along the northern side of the Peninsula, bigger along the south. The most convenient form of transportation to and from Nusa Dua is taxis.

Goa Gajah (Gajah Cave). Dates back to the 11th century and believed to have been built as a monastery. Carvings on the wall show a demon head over the entrance, flanked by two statues. The cave contains a statue of Ganesha. Excavations have uncovered a bathing place with six statues of nymphs holding waterspouts.

Tanah Lot. One of Bali's most important sea temples, the temple sanctuary at Tanah Lot was built a top a huge rock surrounded by the sea. Built by one of the last priests that come to Bali from Java in the 16th century, it's an offering ritual to the guardian spirits of the sea. Poisonous sea snakes found at the base of the rocky island are believed to guard the temple from evil spirits and intruders. The best time to see Tanah Lot is in the late afternoon when the temple is in silhouette.

NUSA TENGGARA

Long overlooked, the islands beyond Bali are a treasure-trove of fascinating cultures and natural wonders. Around 35 km east of Bali, the Nusa Tenggara or Lesser Sunda chain of islands stretches from Lombok to Timor. Nusa Tenggara consists of two provinces, West Nusa Tenggara (Lombok & Sumbawa), and East Nusa Tenggara (Sumba, Flores and West Timor).

WEST NUSA TENGGARA

The Wallace Line, named after 19th century naturalist, Alfred Russell Wallace, marks a point of transition between the flora and fauna of Western and Eastern Indonesia and acts as the Western boundary of West Nusa Tenggara, which includes the islands of Lombok and Sumbawa. The northern part of the island is mountainous and lush with tall trees and shrubs. The south, on the other hand is arid and covered by savannas. Large Asian mammals are absent and replaced instead by marsupials, lizards, cockatoos and parrots. The difference becomes more pronounced as one move further east, where dry seasons are more prolonged and corn and sago are the staple food instead of rice.

At around the time Islam first came to these islands in the 16th century; four Hindu Kingdoms co-existed in apparent peace in what is now West Nusa Tenggara. Lombok experienced strong Balinese influences, but has retained a unique identity. The indigenous people of Lombok, the Sasaks, are predominantly Moslem and have a strong, distinguished tradition, as do the people of neighboring Sumbawa. Soft, white sand, virgin beaches are typical in Lombok. Famous for its ikat hand-woven textiles, the island has exceptional charm and is relatively undiscovered, except for the town of Senggigi, which is becoming a major resort area.

Mataram and Cakranegara. Mataram is the capital of the province, which has in the past decades joined with Ampenan, the port, and Cakranegara to become the province's biggest urban complex. At the beginning of the 18th century, Mataram was the residence of the crown prince of Karang Asem, a Kingdom in Southern Bali. The ruler had his seat in Cakranegara. Lombok's biggest Balinese temple is the Pura Meru in Cakranegara. Anak Agung Made Karang built it in 1720. Dedicated to the Hindu trinity of shiva, Brahma and Vishnu, it has three courtyards. Three pagoda-like places of worship stand in a line from north to south in the innermost courtyard. The one on the north is dedicated to Vishnu and has a roof with nine tiers. The central one is dedicated to Shiva with 11 tiers on its roof, and the southernmost one is for Brahma with a roof of seven tiers. Nearby is Taman Mayura. Once part of the royal palace, it has an artificial lake set in the middle of a park. A raised path leads from the side of the pond to a pavilion built in the middle of the lake. In former days justice was meted out and religious rituals were performed in this open-sided pavilion

Pura Lingsar. This may be the only Hindu shrine in the world where both Hindus and Moslems come to worship. About 7 kilometers west of Narmada, it was built in 1714 and rebuilt in 1878 to symbolize harmony and unity between the Hindu Balinese and Moslem Sasak population of the area, especially those who adhere to Lombok's unique Wektu Telu School of Islam. The Balinese temple was built on higher ground, behind the Moslem section of the compound. In the lower yard is a spring near which pilgrims stage a mock battle between Hindus and Moslems, hurling rice cakes at each other.

Sukarare. This is a traditional weaving center village is located in the south of Cakranegara. Lombok is known for its brightly patterned songket cloth. The techniques, patterns and motifs have been handed down through the generations.

Sengkol, Pujut and Rambitan. Time seems to have frozen in these three villages in Southern Lombok on the road from the capital to Kuta Beach. All the houses and barns are built in the age-old traditional style and life continues daily here as it has for centuries.

Batu Bolong Beach. It is located 9 km from Mataram. This beach has a huge rock with a hole in it. A Hindu temple lies on top overlooking the Lombok Straits to majestic Mt. Agung of Bali. After sunbathing, relaxing and frolicking on this beautiful beachfront, stay till the end of the day to watch one of the most stunning sunsets you have ever seen when the sun slowly begins to disappear behind Mt. Agung.

EAST NUSA TENGGERA

The province consists of over 550 islands, but it's dominated by the three main islands; Flores, Sumba and Timor. The arid landscape of Eastern and Southeastern Nusa Tenggara is the result of hot, dry winds blasting in from the Australian continent. In fact, in many coastal areas not a drop of rain falls during the most of the year. Flores is as a Portuguese name, which means, "Flower", and ideally described the beauty to be found here. These long island between Sumbawa and Timor is crowded with volcanoes and mountains, dividing it into several regions with distinct languages and traditions.

Predominantly Catholic and heavily influenced by the Portuguese, there are many examples of a strong European cultural heritage, like the Easter procession held in Larantuka and the royal regalia of the former king in Maumere. Formerly known as Sandalwood Island. Sumba is now famous for its horses and its superb style for ikat clothe. West Sumba is famous for its enormous megalithic tombs and traditional thatched and peaked huts raised on stilts. Timor is the principal island in the province in terms of population and it is here that the provincial capital of Kupang is located.

Kupang as the provincial capital serves as the gate from Darwin, Australia twice a week. Regular shuttle flights from Bali, Makassar, and Surabaya provides excellent transportation links. There are PELNI ships calling at East Nusa Tenggara regularly sails from Jakarta, Surabaya, Denpasar, Makassar, Biak etc.

Places of Interests

Kupang. The provincial capital of East Nusa Tenggara in western Timor is the center of government, business, trades, and educations. The only sandalwood oil factory in Indonesia is located in this town. Kupang is also the spot for international game fishing every October.

Camplong. A lovely community about 45 km from Kupang with regular market days and a natural swimming pool, where local people bathe, do their laundry, and socialize as they have for thousands of years. Camplong is also a forest reserve protecting rare animals such as "Cervus timorensis" deer and several species of parrots and monkeys.

Maumere. A port town on the northeastern coast of Flores is a good place to stopover on the way to Ende or to Larantuka. It is well connected by air with Kupang. Denpasar and Ujung Pandang, and is noted for its good beaches. The bay of Maumere is considered the best diving spot in Flores, a paradise for divers, underwater photographers, and anyone interested in marine biology. Ledalero museum on the outskirts of Maumere has an interesting collection of ethnological objects should be made. Ledalero is also home to a major Catholic Seminary where many Florinese priests are trained.

Ende. This town contains the home-in-exile of the first Indonesian President Soekarno during the early period of nationalist movements in 1936. The house has been repaired and is today a museum.

Semau Island. Thirty minutes by boat from Kupang, this untrained island paradise is well worth a stopover. The surrounding crystal-clear waters offer exceptional snorkeling and swimming. Bamboo bungalows are available on the white sandy beach, and you can barbeque your freshly caught dinner while enjoying a spectacular sunset.

The Mayura Park. It is all that remains of the Karang Asam Kingdom of Bali, who's King A.A. Ngurah, structure called Balai Kambang, which one functioned as a legal court of Justice and a hall for important meetings. Curiously, its architecture shows both Hindu and Islamic influence, adorned with stone statues in the form of a Moslem hajji.

Kuta Beach. It is also known as Putri Nyale Beach. On the south coast of Central Lombok, It is one of the most scenic mid unspoilt. From Kuta to Tanjung Aan (Cape Aan) is 5 km away, stretches an unbroken expanse of clean white sand lapped by waves of the Indian Ocean. Kuta is safe for bathing and swimming. Further to the west are the surfer and windsurfer's beaches. Each year, on the 19th day of the 10th month of the Sasak lunar calendar, Kuta Beach is the site of great festivals. Fishermen sail out to sea while young men and women gather along the beach to join in the merrymaking, tease each other and perhaps meet to build a more lasting relationship.

Gili Air, Gili Meno, and Gili Trawangan. Gili, in Sasak language means, "Island". These three islands are clustered together just off the northwest coast of Lombok. Coral gardens abound in clear waters around the islands. Gili Air, the nearest island, can be reached in 10 to 15 minutes by outrigger boat from Bangsal Harbor.

Mount Rinjani. A 3,726-meter active volcano is one of the tallest mountains of Indonesia. In the basin of the volcano's huge caldera lies the sickle shaped Crater Lake, Segara Anakan, surrounded by steep walls. The mountain is popular with hikers. Sembalun Bumbung and Sembalun Lawang are two traditional Sasak villages on the slopes of Rinjani.

Mount Tambora, Sumbawa. Not active at present, the 2,820-meter Tambora is notorious for its savage eruption on April 5 – July 15, 1815. Falling debris, hot gases and lava streams killed more than 12,000 people. Some 44,000 more perished of hunger in the aftermath of the explosion. The top, now an immense caldera, has two distinctly colored lakes. From the rim of the crater, the breathtaking view over the rest of the island includes Mt. Rinjani and the island of Lombok rising out of the sea.

↑ Senggigi Beach ↑

Sape, Sumbawa. Shipwrights still make sailboats the traditional way in this port town on Sumbawa's east coast. Sape is a convenient point of departure for trips to Komodo Island across the strait, home of the prehistoric Komodo lizard.

Hu'u Beach, Dompu Regency. This gorgeous white sand beach is one of Indonesia's surfing Mecca's and located at 37 km from Dompu. An international competition held July here, considered as one of the best surfing areas in the world.

Pura Agung Gunung Sari. This great temple on a hill at Mt. Sari, about four kilometers from Mataram, was the site of the infamous Puputan battle, fought on November 22, 1894, between Lombok's last Balinese ruler, Anak Agung Nengah and his followers, and the Dutch troops under General Van der Vetter's command.

Narmada Park. 11 kilometers from the east of Mataram, was built in 1727 by King Anak Agung Gede Ngurah Karang Asem as both pleasure garden and place to worship Shiva. Its big point is said to represent Segara Anakan the Crater Lake on the Rinjani volcano, where they used to make offerings by throwing valuables into the water. As the king became too old to make the pilgrimage up the 3,726-meter high mountain, he had Narmada constructed to represent the mountains and the lake. Near the pond is a place of worship and a spring whose water is believed to give dedicated pilgrims eternal youth.

Mt. Kelimutu. East Nusa Tenggara's most-visited natural wonder and one of Indonesia's most mysterious and dramatic sights, is found on top of this mountain, some 66 km from Ende or 83 km from Maumere. The spectacular view of its three crater lakes, each with a distinct color, is not only a major tourist attraction, but the stuff of myth and legends. The lakes have continuously changed their colors over the years; today the largest is light turquoise, the next olive green and the third black. The local people believe that the souls of young people go to the first when they die, the old to the second, and the black lake is reserved for thieves and murderers.

Larantuka. A little port nestled at the base of a tall hill at the eastern end of Flores; Larantuka has a strong Portuguese cultural heritage. The annual Easter Procession held in this town is well worth the trip if you are here at this time.

Lamalera Whale Hunting. Lamalera on Lembata island is a whaling village. The months of May to September are the whale-hunting season for the people of Lamalera. Using simple traditional tools as Waikabubak. An archaic little town in Western Sumba, full of gold graves carved in motifs of buffalo-horns, horses, nude men and women. There are several megalithic tombs. The fronts of many traditional houses are decorated with huge water buffalo horns from the animals sacrificed during rituals of years gone by. Tarung village, an important ceremonial center, is located on top of a hill just a half kilometer to the west of Waikabubak.

Anakkalang. It is the site of the “Purung Takadonga Ratu”, an important mass marriage festival held every two years, on a determinate date by full moon.

Komodo Island. A small island of 280 square km, Komodo is located between the islands of Sumbawa and Flores. It is famous for its giant pre-historic lizards, considered the last of their kind remaining in the world today, called “ora” by the local people. Komodo “Dragon” (Varanus Komodoensis) is actually a giant monitor lizard. Growing up to 3 until 4 meters in length, its ancestors roamed the earth up to about half a million years ago. The only human population on the island is at the fishing village called Komodo who supplement their income breeding goats which are used to feed the lizards. Law protects the Komodo and although they are, considered harmless, it is advisable to keep them at a distance. Komodo Island is now a nature reserve, home to a number of rare bird species, deer, and wild pigs which are prey to the lizards as well. This island can be reached by boat from Labuan Bajo.

KALIMANTAN

Kalimantan occupies two-thirds of Borneo, the world's third largest island, and shares boundaries with the Sultanate of Brunei Darussalam and the Malaysian states of Sarawak and Sabah.

The dense, tropical lowland rainforests of Kalimantan is among the last in the world, holding a diverse variety of exotic flora and fauna; 600 species of birds (including the hornbills that are sacred to the Dayaks), orangutans, proboscis monkey, clouded leopard, leaf monkeys, crab eating macaques and ant-eating pangolins.

Kalimantan is the land of the Dayak who long ago were famed as fearless warriors and home to the Banjar in the south. Over 200 Dayak tribes inhabit the island, but the most well-known groups are the Kenyah and Kayan in the east, the Ngaju in the central region, and the Iban in the west. Travel down the great rivers, such as the Mahakam, in traditional bamboo rafts, motor longboats or klotok/canoes (river bus) or chartered houseboat to see up close Kalimantan's indigenous inhabitants in their natural surroundings. Organized trips are available through travel operators in bigger cities.

WEST KALIMANTAN

Lying directly on the equator with many canals, crisscross the city and one of Indonesia's longest rivers, the Kapuas (1,143 km long) divides the town in two, providing an essential and historical communications link. Stone carvings and ceramics can be traced as far back as the 5th century, but it is the influence of Islam that has had the most impact on this region. West Kalimantan covers an area of over 145,607 sq km, rich in a variety of minerals and precious stones, and remains largely unexplored.

Coastal areas are mainly swamplands with more than 100 rivers sculpting the flat plains. In the mountainous eastern parts of the province, away from the city and plains, there are many Dayak villages. A large Chinese population, Malays, and other Indonesian ethnic groups account for the rest of the inhabitants of the province. West Kalimantan has a tropical climate with the average daily minimum temperature of 22.9° C and maximum 31.5° C, with light rainy season from March – May and the heavy rain from November-January.

SOUTH SULAWESI

Spanish and Portuguese galleons, followed by British and Dutch traders, sailed these seas in search of the spice trade, escorted by their Men of War to protect them from the daring raids of the Bugis and Makassar pirates. Famed for their seafaring culture, the Bugis are still the driving force behind the world's last commercial sailing fleet. The seafaring Bugis dominates the southern tip of Sulawesi, but often referred to as the "Land of the Heavenly Kings". South Sulawesi is also famous for its tremendous scenery and the quality and talent of its silk and silverwork industries. In Takalar, every May there is a "Galesong Festival" thanksgiving ceremony for throwing offerings into the sea and hoping for a prosperous fortune.

Tana Toraja. The center of tourism in Tana Toraja is Rantepao, 328 kms northeast of Makassar sitting 700 meters above sea level. Rantepao has cool, pleasant evenings. The entry to Tana Toraja is marked by a gate built in traditional boat-shaped style. The road passes the spectacular mountains of Kandora and Gandang on which, according to Toraja mythology, the first ancestors of celestial beings descended from heaven. "Tongkonan", a graceful architecture of the family houses, is built on stilts with the roof rearing up at either end, representing the prows of the first ship to arrive in the area with the Torajan ancestors. The houses all face north, and some say that this is because it was from the north that the ancestors of the Toraja came. Believing that their forefathers descended from heaven in a boat some twenty generations ago, the Torajas have a unique Christian-animist culture. The majority of the people still follow an ancestral cult called "Aluk Todolo", which governs all traditional ceremonies. Their ancestor worship includes elaborate death and afterlife ceremonies, which are essentially great feasts. A strict social hierarchy is followed in the villages, and for an important figure wedding and burial ceremonies can take days to perform. Water buffalo and pigs are sacrificed in numbers appropriate to social rank, and the deceased's remains are placed in a coffin and interred in caves hollowed out in high cliffs. The mouth of the cave is guarded by lifelike statues, called Tau Tau, who looks out from a balcony near the burial caves, watching over the families and friends they have left behind. Two villages with easily accessible cliff graves are Lemo, and Londa. Londa is one of the oldest hanging gravesites, in which are buried many members of local nobility. A large balcony is filled with effigies of the dead, the tau Tau, young village guides with kerosene lamps can be hired to enter the caves and see skeletons and old coffins. At Lemo, burial chambers are cut out of the rock and several balconies filled with Tau Tau overlook new caves being dug to serve as family graves. Palawa is an excellent village to visit the "Tongkonan" and a burial place still swarming with celebrations and festivals. Take a side trip from Rantepao to Ketekesu, a traditional village with excellent handicraft shops. Behind the village on a hillside is a grave site with life size statues guarding over old coffins. As roads are not always paved, it is necessary to use a jeep or walk, even when the weather is good. The best season to visit is between May and October.

Batumonga

It is located about 1,300 meters above the sea level and there are 56 menhir stones which height of 3 meters. The beautiful view of Rantepao and its surrounding valley can be seen from this site.

Losari Beach

Sunsets in the Makassar strait can be viewed from a promenade at Losari Beach, jalan Penghibur or the Paotere anchorage in the north end of the city where the Bugis schooners are berthed. Across the harbor is Kayangan Island, which can be reached in 15 minutes by ferry. A popular escape from the city, there is entertainment in the evenings and on Sundays.

Bantimurung Waterfall. It can be reached about 41 kms from Makassar. A cascade of sparkling water gushes out between rocky cliffs into a stream shaded by tall trees. The brightly colored ornithoid butterflies indigenous in this area are considered among the most beautiful in the world. About 15 meters lower from Bantimurung Waterfall there is a Natural Dreaming Cave with its beauty forms of limestone that brings you to the dreaming world.

Bira Beach Cape. Bira beach Cape in Bulukumba is a beautiful pristine white sand beach, 178 kms Makassar to the south. Traditional shipbuilding is still practiced in this area. This is also the jumping off point for the island of Selayar.

MALUKU

The islands of Maluku are endowed with fine, sandy beaches. The Aru Archipelago, which consists of some twenty-five islands, mangrove swamp and low-lying palm forests, is home to an unusual species of butterfly and flocks of birds of paradise. Maluku is famous for its nutmeg and cloves since the days of the Spice Trade. Even today, cloves, mace and nutmegs are still dried in the sun, the aromatic smell of these spices carried by the breeze. Ruins of forts from the time of the spice trade dot the many islands of Maluku, from tiny Ternate and Tidore in the north to the Banda mini-archipelago, such as Fort Duurnstede on Saparua, Fort Belgica and Fort Nassau in Banda Neira, Concordia and Hollandia on Lontar Island and Fort Revingil on Ail Island.

MALUKU

Maluku is blessed with incredible sea gardens, idyllic, tropical beaches and rugged, forest-coated volcanic mountains. These are the famous 'spice island', which drew Indian, Chinese, Arab and eventually European traders in search of cloves and nutmeg. In 1511, the Portuguese built their first fort in the area on the island of Ternate, and cornered the clove trade. The Dutch, who arrived in 1599, mounted the first serious threat to Portuguese control of Maluku's treasures. Armed conflicts broke out, taking a heavy toll from the island populations as well as the rival European powers.

Getting there:

The main gateway into Maluku is through the provincial capital Ambon, which is served by regular flights to most parts of the archipelago. Air and sea transportation connect the islands with 79 seaports and 25 airports. Roads on many of the islands provide access to more remote places of interest.

When the Dutch finally emerged as victors, they enforced their trade monopoly with an iron fist. Whole villages were razed to the ground and thousands of islanders died, especially on the island of Banda. The British briefly occupied Maluku during the Napoleonic wars, but Dutch rule was restored in 1814 and it wasn't until 1863 that the compulsory cultivation of spices was abolished in the province.

Now, fish and other sea products are Maluku's major sources of revenue. Nickel, oil, manganese and various kinds of timber also contribute to the province's wealth.

Places of Interest:

Ambon. Ambon is the provincial capital of Maluku. It is built on a hillside overlooking the bay. It has a number of interesting

g historical and cultural sites, among the remnants of forts built by the Dutch East Indies Company during the heyday of the spice trade. The ruins of the Portuguese fort at Hila are almost entirely hidden beneath the contorted roots of a giant Banyan tree. The ANZAC War Cemetery near Ambon town is the site of serviced held every year on April 25, to commemorate the Allied soldiers who died in region during World War II. The Siwalima Museum has a fine collection of local arts and crafts. Ambon is the end of the annual yacht race between Darwin, Australia and Ambon. The race usually takes place in July and August.

Beaches and Coral Reefs. Good beaches with the coral reefs can be found around Hunimoa, Latulahat, and Namalatu on Ambon. Namalatu is the nicest beach and a hike to Latulahat will take you to some excellent secluded coves.

Namalatu Beach. It looks out over the Banda Sea on the south coast of Ambon in the Latulahat village some 15 km away from town Ambon. Namalatu has a strip of white sand, coral beach and crystal clear unpolluted water. The scenery is beautiful and attractive. It is an ideal place for sunbathing, swim, snorkel, and scuba diving. Additional facilities Namalatu Beach offers are; shelter, open air stage for dance and music performance and also "rujak" (mixed fruit dsalad with peanut sauce), fresh young coconut peddlers and on prior request people can serve you with barbequed fish and lobster.

Pintu Kota (the gate of the city). It is between the villages Airlow and Seri on the south coast of Ambon island. It is a huge rock stretching out to the sea with a hole at its bottom, which looks like a gate. Through it, we can see the coastline and the Banda Sea. It is an ideal place for snorkeling and diving.

Latulihat Village. It is the main center of bricks production. The sub-village Waemahu is also well known for the production of clove miniature boats handicraft.

Banda. The Banda group, about 132 kilometers Southeast of Ambon, consist of three larger islands and seven smaller ones, perched on the rim of Indonesia's deepest sea, the Banda Sea. Near Manuk Island, the water reaches a depth of more than 6,500 meters. Gunung Api Island is an active volcano that the last major eruption occurred only a few years ago. The seas around Banda are the famous Maluku sea gardens with their fantasyland coral reefs and kaleidoscopic array of multicolored fish darting through the crystal clear water.

Karaka Island, Pisang Island and Ai Island.

They are particularly well known for their amazing snorkeling and diving. Facilities for sightseeing, snorkeling, sky-diving and also clean, comfortable cottages are available on some island.

Banda was home to some of the bloodiest episode of Maluku's history. In 1609 the Dutch East Indies Company dispatched a new governor-general to the islands to obtain the contested spice trade monopoly at any cost. Confronted by superior power, the people of Banda were forced to allow the company to establish a fort, but in the same year Governor Verhoeff was killed, together with 45 of his men. The Company retreated, but peace was not restored. In character to the port town of Bandaneira today. Two old forts Belgica and Nassau are inside the town. Others are found elsewhere on the island. See also former Dutch Governor's mansion, the Museum of History in Neira, and the huge nutmeg plantation nearby. Accommodation and information are most readily available on the "heavily populated" south coast. The north coast boasts some of the best snorkeling in all of Maluku at Asele, 1 hour

East of Waihai.

Seram Island. The second largest island in Maluku, Seram, is virtually untouched because of its wild, rugged interior. Seram receives a lot of rain throughout the year, and is a birdwatcher's paradise. Trekking in the Manusela National Park is about as far off the beaten track as you can get in Indonesia; the Park receives fewer visitors than Baliem Valley in Papua.

PAPUA

Not many people know that Papua is the world's second biggest island. The Last Frontier and the Black Pearl are a few names attributed to this wild and wonderful land, home to an estimated 250 tribes. Sharing its borders with Papua New Guinea, Papua is a land of snow-capped mountains, deep, lush valley, dense jungles and swamps. Its mountains and valleys are trekkers' paradise. Steep highland trails lead to traditional honai villages and the chance to meet friendly local people.

PAPUA

Papua is a land of contrasts, with some of the most impenetrable jungles in the world and snowcapped mountain peaks towering over glacial lakes. Papua is Indonesia's largest and eastern most provinces and covers the western half of the world's second largest island. It is a land of exceptional natural grandeur; with beautiful scenic beaches, immense stretches of marshlands, cool grassy meadows and powerful rivers carving gorges through dense primeval forests. The most heavily populated and cultivated parts of the island are the Lakes Paniai District and the Bailem Valley to the east.

influences. The other tribes have lived, for the most part, in isolation from even one another, resulting in an incredibly diverse mixture of cultures. Traders however visited the coastal regions of Papua, in early 7th century from Sriwijaya.

European traders looking for spices began arriving in the early 16th century, and have left historical footprints in the area with names such as Bougainville, Cape d'Urville and the Torres Straits. It was the Dutch who made the most lasting impact on the island, when in 1828 they formally made Papua a Dutch Territory, which it remained until 1962

Lake Sentani. It can be reach with a short trip from Jayapura. Lake Sentani is still virtually untouched, covers an area of 9.360 Ha with height of 75 m above the level. The people, who call the shores of this magnificent lake home, still live in a traditional manner, and are renowned for their woodworking and pottery.

Kasuarina Cape. It is named after the big casuarinas trees, which grow in the area. Kasuarina Cape is just two kilometers from Sorong, on the Bird's Head Peninsula of northern Papua. Good for swimming and recreation.

Biak. Biak, a town on an island of the same name in Cendrawasih Bay, is a Papua's main gateway. It has better infrastructure than most other places in the province. There are some good beaches on Biak Island. The most popular are Bosnik Beach on the east coast, which is good for swimming and sky-diving, and Korem Beach on the north coast, where one can watch young men dive for pearls. Supiori Island, just north of Biak, has a wilderness reserve and traditional villages where visitors are welcome.

Mummy. The "Jiwika" 300 years old mummy can be found in Jiwika 15,5 km from Wamena and 250 years prumo mummy in Asologaima 32,6 km from Wamena in Jayawijaya Regency.

Baliem Valley

Mount Crstenz Pyramid. It is the highest in the ocean Continent (4.884 meters above sea level). It is located in the western central highland, above the equatorial jungle of Papua. It lies on the least accessible snowcapped ranges in the world on Ngga Pulu/Puncak Jaya (4.862 m asl).

Wamena. The traditional round shaped housing with coars grass roofs, wooden walls without windows is called "Honay" by Wamena people in Jayawijaya Regency.

The Asmat. Asmat people, who live along the remote southeast coast, are famed for their artistic "primitive" woodcarving and the long house.

Modern civilization did not reach this area until recently. They have an interesting museum filled with woodcarving and other objects. Asmat crafts received a boost in the late 1960s under a United Nations supported project that encourage local craftsmen to keep their art alive. Asmat cultural festival held on the beginning of October every year.

Traditional House: Kaki Seribu House. The Arfak ethnic group particularly builds this house. Rare and unique in design, this type of house has many poles to support it. It is for the reason why the house is called Kaki Seribu House (House with one thousand feet). Its walls are made of tree barks; its roof is made of coarse grass. This house can still be found in remote places like Kebar and Anggi.

Meja Mountain and Japanese Monument. This mountain, looking like a table in the distance, is a preserved and protected area. Still a virgin forest, having enchanted and beautiful panorama, this area is good for hiking, and other similar sporting activities. A monument, called Monumen Jepang, has been erected on this mountain to commemorate the first arrival of the Japanese Army, divisions 221 and 222. Only 2 kilometers from Manokwari town, this place can be accessed by motorcycle or on foot.

Maredred Waterfall. Located in Pasir Putih village with a beautiful natural panorama, this waterfall has various types of flora and fauna. It is a wonderful bathing place. It can be reached within ten minutes by boat from Fak-Fak town and by walking within two and a half hours following the riverbank.

Tubir Seram Island. Located in front of Fak-Fak town, this island has amazing and beautiful natural scenery. It has a garden full of many colourful flowers and many types of plants. A monument, called "Perjuangan Merah Putih", was erected there. A mini museum also built there to keep artifact of historical values. It is accessible within five minutes from Fak-Fak town by boat.

Mermaid Cagement. This unique fish is traditionally raised in Webra Village. This place can be accessed by various types of vehicles.

Papera Monument. Erected in 1969, and located in the center of the town, this monument commemorates Indonesia's struggle to have West Papua (the former name of Papua) back. It is located in the center of the town.

World War II Monument. It is built by the Dutch in 1948 in the center of the town. This monument commemorates the assassination of police officers and other government workers by Japanese army.

Japanese Army Fortress. Built in 1944/1945 and located at the center of Kokas town, this fortress was used as a defense and hiding place for the Japanese Army during the Second World War. It can be reached within four hours by boat from Fak-Fak.

Pre-historical Hand Palm Picture. Ancient reddish pictures of hand palm, weapon, and animals on the cliffs of the islands at an average altitude of 10-30 meters from sea level in front of Kokas town.

Cape of Cassuway

It is a beautiful long and clean beach where there are plenty of exotic corals. It is also suitable for diving lovers. The distance from Sorong town is 3 km and can be

The Raja Ampat Island and Coral Triangle.

The Raja Ampat or “Four Kings” archipelago encompasses more than 9.8 million acres (40,000 km²) of land and sea off the northwestern tip of Indonesia's West Papua province. Located in the Coral Triangle, the heart of the world's coral reef biodiversity, the seas around Raja Ampat possibly hold the richest variety of species in the world. Four large islands of Waigei, Batanta, Salawati, and Misool, plus hundreds of smaller islands area is known as the Bird's Head functional seascape.

Cendrawasih Bay. It is the largest marine national park in Indonesia. It's located off the northwest tip of Bird's Head Peninsula on the Island of Papua New Guinea.

Raja Ampat

It is the richest in the world. The area's massive coral colonies show that its reefs are resistant to threats like coral bleaching and disease – threats that now jeopardize the survival of corals around the world. In addition, Raja Ampat's strong ocean currents sweep coral larvae across the Indian and Pacific Oceans to replenish other reef ecosystems. Raja Ampat's coral diversity, resilience, and ability to replenish reefs make it a global priority for marine protection. Raja Ampat's total number of confirmed corals up to 537 species (a remarkable 96% of all scleratinia recorded from Indonesia are likely to occur in these islands), and 699 mollusks species. The variety of marine life is staggering there. Some areas boast enormous school of fish and regular sighting of sharks, such as wobbegongs. In Mansuar, it's highly likely you'll encounter large group of manta rays and turtles. From the boat and often close to shore you may get the chance to done your snorkeling gear for some unforgettable interaction with resident pods of dolphins or even some passing whales. On land, the survey found lush forests, rare plants, limestone outcroppings, and nesting beaches for thousands of sea turtles.

Research Forest. This forest is occupied with many types of plants that are used by the Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry of Cendrawasih University for research purposes. Situated seven kilometers from Manokwari town, it is accessible by motorcycle, car, or public transport.

SEA TRANSPORTATION

PT. PELNI, the state-owned shipping company, now has 30 modern ships serving all main ports from Banda Aceh in the western most tip of the country to Sorong in Papua in the east, built to accommodate 1,000 to 1,500 passengers in four classes, the ships are air-conditioned, whereas first class cabins have attached bathrooms and TV sets, not luxurious but comfortable, ships offer an alternative to flying and is a more leisurely from travel. There are regular sailing schedule and routes, all touching in at Jakarta, their main base. Foreign cruise lines operate in Indonesia waters, though not regularly. A 40-passengers luxury cruise ship, the MV Island Explorer, offers trips to the eastern Indonesia islands from Bali part of the year and from Jakarta to Sumatra the rest of the year. There are also ferries between islands, though comfort may not be as desired. For adventure travelers, a ride on a Phinisi Bugis schooner could be exciting if advance arrangements are made. One of the last sailing fleets in the world; about 3,000 of these schooners still ply between islands, carrying trade goods as they have been for centuries.

LAND TRANSPORTATION

Train service only available throughout Java and part of Sumatra around Padang in West Sumatra, Medan in North Sumatra, Palembang in South Sumatra and Lampung. Several train run between Jakarta and Surabaya. The most comfortable are the air conditioned "Argobromo Anggrek" and "Bima" which travel at night passes Semarang, while the Bima take the southern route through Yogyakarta. Another train "Senja Utama" is an express train to Semarang, Yogyakarta and Solo with reclining seats and air conditioners. Trains to Bandung have regular service from Jakarta and Yogyakarta. The "Argo Gede" offers four services a day between Jakarta and Bandung, while the "Parahiyangan" offers thirteen services a day. Bus services are available and the best known are those serving Bali, Java and Sumatra routes, travelling night and day. Many are air-conditioned and have reclining seats as well as TV set video programmes. There are numerous bus services between major cities in Java and also limousines which provide door to door service.
